'Free country can't exist with 50% tax' Jarvis blasts U.S. economic policy

By J.S. Whaley

"One billion seconds ago Pearl Harbor occurred. One billion minutes ago Jesus Christ was on earth. A billion hours ago man had not appeared on earth. But $1 billion ago was only yesterday afternoon in Washington, D.C."

With these words, Howard Jarvis, co-author of Proposition 13 and self-proclaimed leader of the national tax revolt, opened his 45-minute speech at the LeBaron Hotel in San Jose Thursday.

Speaking at the request of the Commonwealth Club of California, Jarvis outlined his new approach for curtailing taxes on a national level before an audience of approximately 700 including San Jose Mayor Janet Gray Hayes.

Quoting a number of statistics, Jarvis indicated that the American people are being taxed to death and that the economic system that made America great will not be able to continue without some major changes in the tax structure.

"Every person who earns an income spends from January to the 10th day of June working to pay taxes," Jarvis said. "It costs each family of four $1,000 a year for the interest payment on the national debt. More than 50 percent of all incomes of all the people goes to government. With this, a free country can't exist."

The only reason the United States is a great country is because of its economic system, Jarvis said. "When there isn't enough capital to run it, it withers."

Proposals Jarvis is attempting to have implemented include:

- Cutting $100 billion out of the national budget; $25 billion a year for four years. This proposal has been introduced as a bill (HR 1000) to the House of Representatives. According to Jarvis, the proposal will result in a 5 percent cut in the budget per year. He quoted economist Milton Friedman as saying government is 40 percent fat.

- Cutting the federal income tax by $50 billion. This proposal includes a California initiative to cut 50 percent of California's income tax, resulting in a $3 billion loss in revenue to the state.

- To reduce the national debt by 2 percent a year.

- To reduce the capital gains tax exemption to 15 percent of its present level.

"Taxes have to increase less than the rate of inflation," Jarvis said. "The less the better. Business must have capital to invest so kids who come out of college can get a job. That's what it's all about."

Jarvis and his new organization, the American Tax Reduction Movement, will work to have these proposals become law by endorsing those candidates that agree with the tax reduction point of view.

After the passage of Proposition 13, Jarvis noted many political candidates wanted to be endorsed by the organization.

We gave the politicians a "litmus test," he said. "Do you agree with Proposition 13 or not? If they did, we endorsed them."

"We looked up the 14 biggest spenders in the California legislature. They weren't hard to find."

Jarvis said most had weak challengers for re-election. "We supported the challengers; 11 got elected."

Jarvis said his organization endorsed 136 congressional candidates who supported the idea of Proposition 13, and 89 won.

Eventually, Jarvis hopes to have enough supporters in Washington to pass the tax reduction proposals he recommends.

Jarvis said he is working for these goals because, "the governor and president can't do it. Only the people can do it. That's the basis of the constitutional initiative."

Jarvis also spoke about Proposition 13 and its impact on California.

He mentioned a poll taken last month asking how many people would vote for Proposition 13 today. He said it indicated the margin of success would be three-to-one instead of the original two-to-one margin last June.

"No real services have been cut. Under (Proposition) 13, there is ample money to pay for police, fire, streets and sewers. More than ample."

He said Gov. Jerry Brown "was an opponent of (Proposition) 13 until 28 minutes after June 6."

California has 1 percent less inflation than the rest of the country, Jarvis said, adding that personal income due to Proposition 13 will increase $110 billion in the next 10 years.

"Proposition 13 was vital to the economy of California," he concluded.

When a member of the audience asked whether or not Jarvis supported the plan for a balanced budget, he replied that he did not. The idea of balancing the budget without cutting taxes "is a bunch of compost," Jarvis said.

"They can balance the budget by raising taxes. There has got to be a tax cut to balance the budget."

Appealing to the audience to get involved in the struggle to cut taxes, he said, "you and I better take a long look at our government and see what we can do about it."

Not everyone, however, seemed to be in agreement with Jarvis' proposals and conclusions.

After his address, Jarvis held a press conference with approximately 100 high school journalists and students.

The group didn't appear to be as pleased with the passage of Proposition 13 as Jarvis was.

Many students were upset about his remarks calling the school system "the worst it has been in 200 years."

One student asked Jarvis if no real services have been cut, why is his school losing teachers and classes?

It couldn't be Proposition 13, Jarvis replied, because the schools have $1 billion more to spend this year than they did last year.

He also said it won't matter anyway because of a California Supreme Court ruling that public school students must receive equal amounts of financing.

This ruling will take effect Jan. 1, 1980, and could result in the elimination of the property tax to support public schools.

Suspect in campus theft arrested: police say theft rate is increasing

By Mark Schwenden

University Police arrested a juvenile Thursday afternoon near the women's gym on suspicion of petty theft.

Police believe the suspect may have been involved with several thefts that have occurred in the past two months.

Reports of petty theft have been rising this semester, according to University Police Sgt. William Correll.

Petty thefts leveled off but still remained high in March and April, according to Greg Wixom, University crimes prevention officer.

Correll reports that loss of personal property on campus rose above average in December and January and peaked in February.

Wallets, watches, rings, necklaces and other personal items are lost because people leave these articles in offices or other places thieves can get into, Correll said.

Wixom said gym lockers are a prime target along with campus offices.

Even a padlocked locker is not always safe, Wixom said, adding that some thieves are equipped with a two-foot long burglary tool that can be slipped up a person's shirt sleeves. The tool will force open a regular padlock within 30 seconds. "The lock can be re-closed with almost no trace," he said.

The men's gym is one of the highest theft areas on campus, Wixom said.

"These thieves are no dummies. They know exactly where to look," Correll said.

Wixom offered advice for students and faculty who bring valuables on campus.

Never leave small valuables or wallets in unlocked offices, even for a few minutes.

Try to get a locker in a heavy traffic area. Buy the best quality padlock you can. Never put anything of value in an unlocked locker or leave it unlocked for even a minute. Never assume a place is safe if you bring something of value to school.

SJPD asks citizen aid to solve thefts

By Maureen Riley

In an effort to reduce the serious crime problem in the campus area, the San Jose Police Department is asking for community help.

SJPD has reported possible leads in three burglaries that occurred within the last 10 days within the campus community.

A burglar broke into a residence at 460 S. Fourth St. early Tuesday morning. He tied up a young couple and took an eight-track stereo receiver, two speakers and some money.

The couple described the man as an Eskimo-Indian in his late twenties, 5-foot 7-inches to 5-foot 8-inches tall, 150 to 160 pounds, short black hair, narrow face and tattoos on both arms. He was last seen wearing a dark blue peacoat and dark pants.

A rooming house at 418 S. Third St. was the site of an April 13 attempted burglary. Two antique doors valued at $5,000 were removed from their hinges, but the burglars fled the house, leaving the doors, after their truck was spotted by a resident of the house. The truck, a 1963 white Ford pick-up, was seen at the back of the residence according to a San Jose police report.

A tenant at an apartment complex at 529 S. 10th reported the April 15 theft of a color television set, a movie camera, a set of encyclopedias and a red jacket with gold lettering. Although no suspect was reported, police found several sets of usable finger prints in the apartment.

However, there are no leads for an April 17 burglary at 394 W. San Fernando St. A television, pocket calculator, some loose change and a purple piggy bank containing $1 in pennies were taken.

SJPD is asking anyone with information about the burglaries to contact Sgt. John Kracht of the burglary unit at 277-4401.

Theft takes many forms on campus. Leaving valuables in an unlocked locker or office is not the only way to lose them. A competent thief can lift a wallet from an open top purse as shown posed above, without the victim even knowing it is gone. Campus theft has gone up this semester and students and faculty are advised by the University Police to be on guard against these crimes.

Not all students want to march to new man's beat

Michigan band director heads SJSU marchers

By Mary T. Lee

SJSU's newly appointed marching band director, Carl Chevallard, fielded questions and comments from band members and music students angry over his recent appointment which left Bill Nicholosi, former director, out of a job.

Robert Cowden, music department chairman announced Friday that Chevallard, former assistant director of bands at Michigan State University, was unanimously chosen by a selection committee after a nationwide search to fill the newly created faculty position of band director.

Chevallard's position, Cowden said, is a faculty position which requires him to teach in addition to directing the marching band. When Nicholosi was band director, his position was a staff member and he devoted all his time to the band.

Nicholosi was unavailable for comment.

"Through the efforts of a number of people," Cowden said, "we have a marching band back here after a number of years without one."

"When the band came back this year, it was super," he said to the students. "One of the best compliments you have been given is that the administration said, 'We will give you two positions.'"

According to Cowden, applications for the positions of band director were received from all over the United States. The selection committee then narrowed the field down to four finalists, by reviewing dossiers, films and tapes provided by the applicants.

"The unanimous position of the committee," Cowden said, "was that Carl Chevallard was the most qualified person for the job."

When asked why, since the band had been deemed "super" under Nicholosi's direction, the music department felt a change should be made, Cowden replied there were two reasons.

"First," he said, "the person who put together this organization (Nicholosi) had a staff position with no teaching responsibility." That person, Cowden said, along with an assistant, could devote all his time to the band. Any two people, in the same situation, could have done as good a job, he added.

This comment brought laughter and jeers from the assembled band members.

Secondly, Cowden explained, the university system is legally bound to conduct a national search when a faculty position is created.

"The committee's determination," Cowden said, "was that there was no comparison among the candidates. Carl was the most qualified candidate."

One student in the group expressed the sentiment that Nicholosi made the band what it is today. He described the hours of hard work on the part of both Nicholosi and the band that gave it the quality it now has.

Cowden responded saying, "There is a large difference between professional and personal relationships. There is no such thing as a marching band outside of the music department...it has to be part of a larger program."

"What I have heard," Cowden continued, "is a discussion centered around one or two individuals. I say a marching band program has to be more than that."

At one point in the discussion, marching band members were chided by other present for their "rudeness" to Chevallard when a student referred to him as the "new wizard."

A chill for the press

By Sean Silverthorne
Memo:
To: All Spartan Daily reporters and interested readers.
Re: Recent Supreme Court decision in Herbert vs. Lando.

Sean Silverthorne is Spartan Daily editor

The Supreme Court handed down a libel decision last week which most press organizations have called a "major blow" against the media. I'll leave that to you to decide, but be aware that the ruling affects everyone of you.

The law now says when a public official or public figure sues for libel, the prosecuting attorney may put you on the witness stand and ask questions about your "state of mind" when you wrote a story. "Why did you choose this quote over that one?", "Did you personally like the person you were writing about?"

Public officials need to prove one of two points to collect libel damages: That you knowingly published false information, or you showed "reckless disregard for the truth" (which so far has been interpreted as extreme carelessness). These standards still apply. What the new rule does is to make "actual malice" easier to show in a court of law.

A more serious consequence, perhaps, is the so-called "chilling effect" this decision may have on you as a reporter. You hold back writing a fact because of what might happen to you. One of your colleagues has already felt that chill.

The day ABC broke the news of the decision, he asked if he should be pulled off a story. He had written a negative opinion piece on someone who might be indirectly involved in a potentially libelous story he was working on. Wouldn't that opinion show negative intent in the new story leading to a possible libel suit?

No. The person pressing charges would still have to prove the knowingly publishing false information or reckless disregard standards to prove libel. If the reporter wrote the story responsibly, and accurately, there was no need to worry, he was told. But the chill was there.

The chilling effect is also felt by editors who are responsible for their paper's product, and by owners, who pay lawyers fees and, sometimes, settlements.

The ultimate loser is the reader. They are deprived of information which you fearfully withhold from your story.

Another interesting point. Your own attorney could use the new ruling to your benefit in a libel defense, as was recently tried by the lawyers for reporters Raul Ramirez and Lowell Bergman. The attorneys wanted to show the court the reason the reporters wrote their stories (their state of mind) was because of alleged misconduct by police.

You may feel that the Supreme Court is drawing an ever tighter noose about your neck. Recent decisions have allowed police agencies to confiscate your "work product" (notes, tapes, etc.) with only a search warrant, subpoena your phone records, and, of course, throw you in jail for refusing to identify your sources.

Legislative relief may be on the way. The Stanford Daily decision is already the subject of pending corrective legislation, and this most recent court ruling will probably spawn a flurry of more legislative aid. What form that legislation will take, and whether that legislation will truly be beneficial to press freedom, remains to be seen.

Until then you're stuck with the Burger court's narrowing interpretation of the First Amendment which states, in apparent contradiction, "Congress shall make no law...abridging freedom of speech, or of the press..."

Tenants have rights with obligations

By Cindy Tong
Editor's note: This is the first of two articles on tenants' rights and obligations and how to deal with eviction and lawsuits. Part two will appear tomorrow.

Do you know your rights as a tenant?

With more rent increases and less

Cindy Tong is a

housing available, tenants now have to be more careful in choosing the right place to live and making sure they get their money's worth in the condition of their premises and service from the landlord.

What can you do if your landlord refuses to make repairs on your apartment, decides to evict you or refuses to return your deposit?

There are certain rights and obligations which tenants should be aware of when renting or leasing a place to live.

The following is a basic guideline of tenants' rights provided by the Santa Clara County Asian Law Alliance.

There are basically three types of rental agreements: the oral agreement; the written lease; and the written rental agreement.

An oral agreement is a legal agreement, but a disadvantage if you want your agreement in clear and precise terms.

Before signing anything, be sure you know and understand what is in the agreement.

Make sure you know if you are signing a lease or a rental agreement.

Under a lease, you will be renting for a definite period of time.

risk being evicted upon a 30-day written notice by the landlord and you also are subjected to rent increases upon a 30-day written notice.

If you decide to leave before your lease is up, most agreements contain a provision which allows you to sublet (find a new tenant to fulfill the remainder of the lease) with the landlord's written consent.

You may want to change this provision so the landlord cannot reject any new tenant you find, unless there's a reasonable cause such as bad credit references.

... put down all promises
the landlord makes in writing ...

An advantage of this is that your rent cannot be raised within the period. Also, you cannot be evicted during the leasing period as long as you don't violate any terms of the lease.

In a month-to-month agreement, you have the freedom to move out after giving the manager a 30-day written notice.

The disadvantages are that you

If your lease does not have a sublet provision, you have the right to assign or sublet your apartment. However, the landlord sometimes will continue to collect rent directly from you.

Unless the new tenant's name replaces yours on the agreement, you will remain responsible for making sure the rent is paid.

You also should know whether or not water, gas, electricity and garbage are included in the rental price.

It is advisable that you take a written inventory of the condition of the premises when you move in because it will be important when you request your cleaning deposit.

Put down all problems and all promises the landlord makes in writing, include the dates by which repairs are to be completed and have the landlord sign the inventory.

You can also go through the premises with a witness and take photos.

Some things to check for are the plumbing, ceiling, heating, electricity, fire safety, garbage and trash receptacles, bathrooms, kitchen, insects, rodents, dirt, ventilation and lights.

Most landlords require some type of deposit when entering into a rental agreement with a tenant. You and the landlord must clearly understand what the deposit is for and when and under what terms you will get it back.

The landlord requires a security deposit in order to cover any or all of the following: unpaid rent; repair or damages caused by a tenant; costs of cleaning the premises.

The landlord may retain only the amount "reasonably necessary" to compensate for such rent, repair or cleaning.

Under agreements made or renewed on or after Jan. 1, 1978, no deposit (whether it is called a cleaning fee, security deposit or advance payment or rent) can be non-refundable.

The landlord may not deduct the costs of repairing damages which can be considered normal wear and tear from your deposit.

The deposit owed to you after legal deductions are made must be returned no later than two weeks after you move out and must be accompanied by a written itemized accounting of how it was spent.

If you don't receive your refund within two weeks, write the landlord for an explanation - preferably by certified mail, return receipt requested.

If your deposit still is not returned to you and your claim does not exceed $750, you may sue the landlord in small claims court.

If you think there is no honest disagreement involved and the landlord is trying to cheat you, you may be able to collect damages up to $200 more than the actual amount you are owed.

If you are asked to pay "last month's rent," you are paying rent in advance and will not be required to pay for the last month of tenancy.

Sometimes a landlord will ask for a deposit of about $20 to hold the place until you pay the first month's rent and the deposit fee agreed upon.

If you later decided not to take the place, you will probably forfeit your holding deposit.

However, when you do take the place, the deposit should be applied to the first month's rent.

If any dispute arises concerning the return of security deposits, cleaning fees or the like, this could be the basis of a complaint in a small claims court.

Facts of life the hard way

By Norman Gotwetter

From time to time, all of us should re-examine our problems, to see how bad they really are.

If the following letter, sent in anonymously to the Daily, doesn't force you to do so, nothing ever will...

"Dear Editor:

"To you, it may seem like no big groove, but to me it means destruction. My friends know I am straight (boring).

"I do not needle my veins.

"I do not smoke anything.

"I do not booze myself out. I do not get high on pills. I do not foul language. I do not like to go to discos.

"I will not go to bed until I am legally wed. And my eight o'clock class is Catholic Tradition. I am getting uptight being called 'Miss Innocent' and 'Sandy' from 'Grease'.

My friends and many other people do not mind having sex. And I know if I ever tell my friends that I had sex before, they'd burst out laughing. They would know it in their guts that I am lying.

"But hey! I HAD SEX BEFORE! Though I cannot prove it without revealing myself, it's the honest truth. It's even kinda hard to believe it myself. Me? I've done it?

In grammar school I was very stupid. No, not concerning schoolwork. I was the "Smartie" of the class—I was an uninformed kid; I knew nothing about the birds and the bees or the bad consequences.

"We would do it each time my parents went out to the local movie theater. He knew the nights exactly. He was 27; I was—nine! I thought it must be okay. I mean since he was my uncle. Later he was sent to prison for something I still do not even know about.

"A few years passed and in 1973 me and my family moved here, and the year before I had found out about the facts of life. My uncle got out of jail (do not know when), and later he visited the family from "home."

"I was kinda afraid for now I could get pregnant. He saw how I blossomed (sort of), and he knew there is no way we could ever do it again.

"And as long as I am single, I am not planning to with anybody. I am 19 now; "Uncle" is 38. Our secret shall remain silent in our family. We both know they must never find out.

"But I know my past. I know the things I did. They will never believe me, unless I am put on a lie detector, but somehow it would reach my family and I do not want that to happen.

"That is why I am upset at my image. (If my friends only knew.) I want to scream to them, "You began doing it in your teens! I did it at age nine! While you were at home reading fairy tales, I was at home having sex!"

"This letter may seem silly and childish to you, but at least it's out, though no one knows who I am and I do feel a bit better.

"Please understand why I cannot sign my true name. I am sorry.

No Name

"P.S. There is laughter everywhere..."

Now, how bad are those problems you've been having?

Black, Ross set lifetime bests; three tracksters sustain injuries

SJSU's men's track and field team had a mixture of good performances and minor injuries Saturday at the Mt. San Antonio College (SAC) Relays as they prepared for the upcoming San Jose National Invitational.

Two Spartans recorded lifetime bests in their respective events but three others sustained minor injuries and one more has left the team.

Kim Black, a junior from College of San Mateo and the 1978 state junior college pole vault champion, cleared a career best 17-2 in that event to win the open university division.

Black's effort moved him into a tie with Roger Martin for fourth place on the all-time SJSU pole vault list.

Sophomore Stan Ross, a third place finisher in last year's PCAA finals in the 1500-meter run, was sixth in the 300-meter run at Mt. SAC with lifetime best 1:51.3. Ross' best half-mile so far this season was 1:55.

However, javelin thrower Curt Ransford strained his elbow on his first throw and dropped out of the competition.

Ransford has been the Spartans' top thrower all year and is undefeated in dual meets.

In the 110-meter high hurdles, Pete Austin won his heat in 14.29 but at the expense of a slight muscle pull, and he did not compete in the finals.

SJSU's Phil Williams aggravated a sore hamstring while running the anchor leg of the 400-meter relay. The Spartans were leading the race until Williams pulled up with about 30 yards to go. He did manage to finish fifth, but the team ran its worst time of the season - 40.81.

The extent of the injuries will not be known until later this week.

Also, sophomore sprinter Marcus Washington, who set the freshman record in the 100 last year at 10.4 and is a member of the 400 relay, has left school and is no longer on the team, according to team officials.

The Spartans did have fine efforts from athletes who have been performing well throughout the season.

Greg Woepse, whose 17-7 in the pole vault earlier this season is the second-best in SJSU history, went 17-5 at Mt. SAC to place fourth in the Invitational section.

Shot putter Bob Feuerbach, who placed fourth in the NCAA finals last year, had a heave of 59-9 for fourth at Mt. SAC. The winner of the event, former San Jose City College athlete Dave Lait threw 66-9 which is the best collegiate mark in the nation this season.

In the triple jump, Rex White went 50-4 for second place, missing victory by a scant inch-and-a-half. It marked the third week in a row that White has cleared the 50-foot barrier.

The busiest Spartan, as usual, was Mike Kirtman, who ran the third leg of the mile relay, won his heat in the high hurdles in 14.34 and finished fourth in his heat of the 200 meter dash in 21.5.

Last year Kirtman was the sixth highest SJSU dual meet point scorer with 40.

Kevin Cole, a member of the 400 relay, took first in his heat of the 100 in 10.73. Teammate Ken Thomas, who last week beat two world class sprinters in Eddie Hart and Houston McTear, was third in his 100 heat at 10.71. Thomas was also a member of the 400 relay team.

All timing at Mt. SAC was done electronically which is approximately .25 of a second slower than hand timing.

SJSU's two 1976 Olympic qualifiers, Stephen Chepkwony and Essodina Achade from Kenya and Togo respectively, missed the plane flight Saturday morning and did not compete.

Chepkwony has been the Spartans' main 400 meter runner and has clocked a 47.4 this season. Achade underwent minor surgery earlier in the season but competed against the University of Arizona two weeks ago, jumping 24-7.

Team officials noted that the Mt. SAC affair, for the Spartans, was mainly a meet to get them geared up for the San Jose National Invitational at Bud Winter Field Saturday.

The meet will include top colleges, track clubs and individuals from around the country. World class sprinter Clancy Edwards - 10.15 for 100 meters and 20.33 for the 200 - has confirmed that he will be competing at the meet.

In the past, seven world records have been broken in the San Jose Invitational and three of those were set by discus thrower Mac Wilkens, who is entered Saturday.

TRACK TALK - The qualifying standards for June's NCAA finals at Mt. SAC are extremely tough. Only five Spartans have qualified for the meet June 7 - Feuerbach in the shotput (40-10 3/4), Thurlis Gibbs in the high jump (7-2 1/2), Ransford in the javelin (245-6) and Woepse (17-7) and Black (17-2) in the pole vault. Tickets are on sale for the San Jose Invitational at $2 for students, $3.50 for adults if bought in advance and $4 if purchased at the gate. Call the SJSU Athletic Ticket Office (277-3241) for more information. The Spartans are undefeated in dual meets this season and have yet to be held under 90 points.

Kevin Cole breaks the tape for SJSU's 400-meter relay team in a winning effort at a recent meet. The relay foursome has posted a season best 39.7 this season.

Stiles lands on his feet as Philadelphia assistant

By Chuck Hildebrand
Daily Sports Editor
After three years in the darkness of frustration and uncertainty at SJSU, former head football coach Lynn Stiles is in the daylight again.

Stiles, now an assistant coach with the Philadelphia Eagles of the National Football League, says professional football is a welcome change after his stormy term as head coach at SJSU.

"The hypocritical nature of college football sours my mouth," Stiles said in a telephone interview from Philadelphia. "In college they talk about building character and developing lasting relationships and all that. It sounds flowery, but the bottom line is always to win.

"The pros admit it's a business, and they put everything they have into it. It's the same business in college football, but generally that isn't admitted."

Stiles was fired by athletic director Bob Murphy in November after compiling a three-year record of 18-16, including one outright Pacific Coast Athletic Association championship (1976) and a share of another last season.

He was subsequently hired as an assistant by the University of Colorado but when longtime friend and colleague Dick Vermeil, head coach of the Eagles, came along with an offer in February Stiles was quick to accept.

"It's always been more important to me who I work for than where I work," Stiles said. "After my experience at San Jose State, that aspect has become more important than ever."

"I'm here not to work for the Philadelphia Eagles, but for Dick Vermeil. And so far it just couldn't be any better."

Stiles' duties in Philadelphia include working with the tight ends and special teams in addition to being Vermeil's administrative assistant.

He noted that most of the players he has communicated with are "super guys, dedicated to what Dick (Vermeil) is trying to do" and that Eagles' owner Leonard Tose had given Vermeil complete freedom in building the program - something Stiles says he never had at SJSU.

"I'll believe as long as I live that San Jose has assets that can't be matched, like the area and the chance to go up against the Pac-10 schools," Stiles said.

"But San Jose State seems to be much more popular outside the immediate vicinity than in San Jose itself, because outside the Bay Area SJSU isn't constantly compared to Stanford and UC-Berkeley," Stiles said.

Stiles thinks SJSU President Gail Fullerton's leadership will eventually help lay the foundation for long-range athletic success.

"I have a lot of confidence in Dr. Fullerton," Stiles said. "I think she has foresight and perception. She'll evaluate and be objective, and she won't act on impulse."

But Stiles stressed that the SJSU program won't go anywhere without persistence and hard work - along with an athletic director who works behind the scenes and coordinates affairs.

"I was kind of envious when we played at places like Utah State last year," Stiles said. "I look at what they have, and a lot of it is because of Ladell Anderson (USU athletic director)."

"He's on to of things, but he's behind the scenes. So are guys like Ray Nagel at the University of Hawaii. You don't see those guys doing play-by-play on the radio (as Murphy did at SJSU). They put in 24 hours a day working to build the programs, and the programs have earned respect because of it."

Since joining the Eagles, Stiles says everything has gone right for him.

"We sold our house ourselves and we close escrow on a new house here this week," he said. "The family arrives this week. I'm working for somebody who I like and respect and everybody has been great to me.

"I'm a happy man again."

Spartans enjoy San Francisco

By Dan Wood

SAN FRANCISCO—The last time the SJSU baseball team traveled to San Francisco, the Spartans dropped both ends of a doubleheader to lowly USF.

Things were quite a bit better here Saturday as SJSU trounced San Francisco State 14-3.

Added to their 11-3 pasting of the Gators Friday night in San Jose, Saturday's win increased the Spartans' present winning streak to eight games and pushed their overall record to 31-14.

San Francisco State was simply no match for the Spartans in either contest, as SJSU toyed with its non-league opponent from the Far Western Conference.

SJSU pounded out 14 hits Friday night at PAL Stadium, and 15 more Saturday. The Gators were able to manage a total of only 14 safeties in both games.

San Francisco State coach Orrin Freeman was very impressed with the Spartans.

"They're as good a team as we've played all year," Freeman said. "They're much better than St. Mary's or Pacific. I can see them being a championship team."

Freeman should know what it takes to make a champion. He was a member of three national championship squads while pitching for the University of Southern California.

His Gators hastened their own demise Saturday, committing seven errors, which led to eight unearned Spartan runs.

The first SJSU run, unearned, came in the top of the first. San Francisco State took its only lead of the day in the bottom of the inning on a two-run home run by first baseman Ralph Hodge.

From there it was all SJSU, as a six-run fifth inning did the Gators in. The frame was highlighted by a towering two-run homer off the bat of Ernie Hayden.

Greg Robles continued his torrid hitting for the Spartans, rapping out two doubles and two singles Saturday to drive in four runs.

Hayden, Brian Stuckey and Derek Bulcock all had two hits for SJSU, and Chris Gallego had three RBI.

Hodge was about the only bright spot for San Francisco. He added a triple and single to the homer, going three for four.

Dave Nobles went the first six innings on the hill to get the win, his eighth of the year against only two losses. Jay Brazil finished, and earned a save.

The story had been much the same the previous evening in San Jose, when the Spartans took an early 1-0 lead only to see it evaporate on a fourth-inning Hodge home run with a man on.

San Francisco State started its top hurler, Jim Baugher, Friday night, but he lasted only three innings before retiring with a tender knee.

When Freeman had to go to his bullpen it was all over. SJSU raked relievers Larry White and Jeff Creamer for ten runs, half of them coming in the fifth.

Randy Raphael went all the way on the mound for SJSU, scattering eight hits while raising his record to 6-5.

"That pitcher was excellent," Freeman said of Raphael. "He was around the plate all night."

Indeed he was. Raphael walked only one batter, while striking out eight.

Chris Pedretti's two-run triple was the big hit in the Spartans' fifth inning rally. Pedretti later drove in a third run with a single.

Robles had three hits Friday night, including a pair of doubles.

It was a first basemen's series, as Robles was seven for nine while Hodge was five for eight in the two games.

Dan Addiego added two singles and a double to the Spartans' attack Friday night, and Hayden drove in three runs with a pair of singles and a sacrifice fly.

The Spartan hitting has done quite a turnabout since the opening day doubleheader sweep by USF. That afternoon, SJSU got only eight hits in the two games.

The Spartans may not have felt the same way a couple of months ago, but they proved Saturday that San Francisco really can be a great place to visit.

Golfers' poor start results in fifth place

By Danny Edwards

STANFORD--SJSU's men's golf team came on strong during the last round of the United States Collegiate Invitational here Saturday but a poor showing by the Spartans in the first round was too much to overcome as they finished fifth out of 24 colleges.

The Spartans, ranked ninth in the nation and winners of the Western Intercollegiate Invitational last week, were in ninth place after the first round of the three-day 54-hole event on the 6,710 yard Stanford Golf Course.

SJSU moved up to seventh place after 36 holes and had its best round on the third day to take fifth.

"We played pretty well today," said SJSU coach Jerry Vroom, "but we might have had a letdown after winning the Pasatiempo tournament (Western)."

The team championship was never really close as UCLA took a six stroke lead after the first day, continued to play well, and won by 11 shots over second place Fresno State. Each team consisted of six players with the top four players from each team after the first round making up the team scores for the rest of the tournament.

The top 10 teams were: UCLA 873, Fresno State 884, San Diego State 897, Nevada-Reno 898, SJSU 900, Stanford 901, University of Pacific 908, University of Arizona 911, UC Davis 915, and University of Seattle 917.

The tournament was missing three collegiate golf powers in USC, Arizona State and Brigham Young.

The Spartans have defeated each of the first four teams at least once this season.

Steve Gazzaneo and Don Levin both had totals of 221 to lead SJSU, though both struggled throughout the last round.

Gazzaneo fired rounds of 72 and 73 but then ballooned to 76 as he had trouble around the greens.

"I was hitting the ball well but I couldn't make a putt," he said. "I couldn't get any of my long putts close."

Levin shot 74 on the last day after coming off a fine one-under-par round of 70 the day before.

SJSU's Mark Wiebe, who was not among the top four Spartans after a first round 83 and did not figure in the team scoring, birdied the 18th hole on the last day to finish with a 70 - tying Stanford's Kim Cate for the best score of the third round.

Wiebe shot 75 on the second day to finish with a 228 total. Teammate Alan Swank opened with a 78 and improved steadily with a 77 and 75 for 230.

Don DeLorenzo and 76, 82, 76 for 234. DeLorenzo, Wiebe and Swank provided some fireworks on the last round as they all eagled the 535-yard, par 5 seventh hole.

Lenny Coements of San Diego State ran away with the individual title as he shot rounds of 68, 67 and 75 for a total of 210. Cater and Fresno's Tim Norris tied for second at 214 and Tom Rudolph of UCLA was fourth with 215. Nevada-Reno's Dan Armbruster picked up fifth with a 217 total.

The Spartans, who have won five tournaments so far this season, travel to Phoenix for the three-day 54-hole Sun Devil-Thunderbird Invitational beginning Thursday.

Smith wins for Missions; Pads 0-9

Doug Smith baffled Reno with a two-hit shutout and Dave Henderson rifled a two-run homer as the San Jose Missions earned a 5-0 decision in California League baseball action Saturday night at San Jose Municipal Stadium.

Smith, who improved his record to 2-0, struck out five and walked four during his gem.

After Mobil Cox advanced to second after singling in the first, no other Silver Sox baserunners got as far as second.

Meanwhile, Henderson provided Smith with all the offensive support he needed, whacking a Troy Dixon changeup over the left-center field wall in the first inning after Al Weston drew a walk.

San Jose managed only six hits against Dixon and Randy Miller, who came on in the eighth - but the Missions were aided by three errors, two coming on wild throws by catcher Mike Martin on San Jose base stealing attempts.

Left fielder Mike White turned in the defensive play of the game, robbing John Alvarez with a somersaulting grab of a short liner in the third.

San Jose, which improved its Cal League record to 7-2, played before only 541 fans at Muni.

However, the Missions' crowd looked like a mob compared to the gathering of 44 which watched the Santa Clara Padres fall to 0-8 in Cal League action Friday afternoon.

The Padres, who lost their ninth straight to Modesto Saturday night at Washington Park in Santa Clara, fell to the same club 8-2 in an afternoon game at Muni Friday.

Padres starter Charlie Phillips pitched well for four innings, surrendering only a fourth-inning tally which Modesto scored despite not hitting a ball out of the infield during the inning.

But the visiting A's got to him for three markers in the fifth and finished him off with three more in the sixth. Two Santa Clara errors contributed to the carnage in the sixth.

Rick Hertel singled in the Padres' only run in the fifth. "Things have got to get better," lamented Santa Clara manager Joe Volpi. "They can't get much worse."

THE metaphysical necessity of the doctrine of predestination is a microcosm of the dichotomy of aesthetic and existential views of the Neo-platonic hierarchy. Whereas metaphysics, epistemology and ethics exemplify the cosmopolitan and archetypal dualism of humanism. Dedicated to Dr. Dennis, an anachronism in the Great Chain of Being. I hope his outogeny recapitulates his phylogeny.

HAPPY Birthday Lislie F. Signed, thefox.

TO DANNY (Duck hunter extraordinaire). Happy 8 Day wishes on your 21st! Love, B.
